

Your Husband May Come Back in Style

By Count Marco

Look at that old couch, lamp, table or hat you wish you could unload and think of him.

When you first bought them they were probably all the rage. You simply had to have them. Now after a few years, you wonder what in the world ever made you choose those particular ones. And with good reason. Your tastes have changed.

Same way with husbands. Years ago you simply had to have that model and you took him home with you. Now, a few years later, you glower at him over the TV dinner tray wondering how of all those other models on display, you could have been so stupid as to think this one would be a fine ornament to have hanging around your house.

Take heart, my dears. It happens to the best. Even though that furniture, lamp, hat or man may now look pretty sad to you, there will be a change and they'll all be back in style one day.

Take joy in knowing that he'll be a treasure even better than when new. It's simply a matter of tastes, which change with time.

Remember how Victorian houses were all the rage and everyone had to have one? But as the years added up and the paint peeled they didn't look so attractive any more. Some lost their value and were discarded or traded in for newer, less bulky models.

Ah, but today Victorians are once more in demand, prized admired and desired. So be it with him.

Just because at the moment he may not be a collector's item, particularly in your collection, hang on. Instead of unloading him, ignoring or abusing him, give him special care. Only a few years from now your tastes will change again and as with the lamps, couch et al, he'll be back in favor, admired and wanted by everyone, especially you.

And lucky you, knowing good things when you had them. To your everlasting joy you are now getting more than double your original investment.

But in your joy, pause for a moment and have pity on those other old biddies who couldn't wait and dumped their dislikes on the open market, thus losing their treasures forevermore to some other collector who must by now be treasuring them.

And lucky you, you wise treasure-holder you, every morning keep saying over and over, "It's only a matter of time."

Harbor College Schedules Theater Classes for Fall

Classes in World Theater and in Beginning, Intermediate, and Advanced Acting will be offered in the Harbor College evening division during the fall semester, it was announced today by Dwight Garner, chairman of the Humanities Division.

World Theater, a new survey course in the development of Theater, will examine the methods of staging plays and styles of acting from early Greeks to modern times. Playwrights such as Aeschylus, Euripides, Menander, Terence, Lope de Vega, Sophocles, Marlowe, Shakespeare, Ibsen and Strindberg, are discussed. This course is recommended for those who are interested in a broad background of dramatic literature from the early Greeks to modern times.

The course is acceptable for three units of credit at UCLA and Long Beach State College.

THE BEGINNING applied acting course is designed for students who have had no background or experience. Basic elementary techniques and the use of body and voice are stressed. Freedom of expression and personality growth are vital aspects of this course. The Intermediate and Advanced Acting courses are for students with previous theatrical training. These courses are highly recommended for those in the fields of teaching, law, recreation or salesmanship.

REUBEN G. Plaskoff, who is head of the Theater Arts Department at Harbor College and who has degrees from USC and Ohio University, will teach the courses. He has established a reputation in both the professional and educational theater as director, coach, lecturer and instructor.

In 1957, Plaskoff toured Europe where he completed an extensive study of the acting techniques used in European acting schools. Plaskoff was

Lomita Skindiver Treated for Cuts

Hit by an outboard motorboat while skindiving, a Lomita man was treated for a badly cut arm Sunday at South Bay Hospital, Redondo Beach. John Anderson, 31, of 2429 W. 255th St., received treatment after being hit by the propeller of the boat while skindiving in Redondo Beach waters.

How much is an inch?

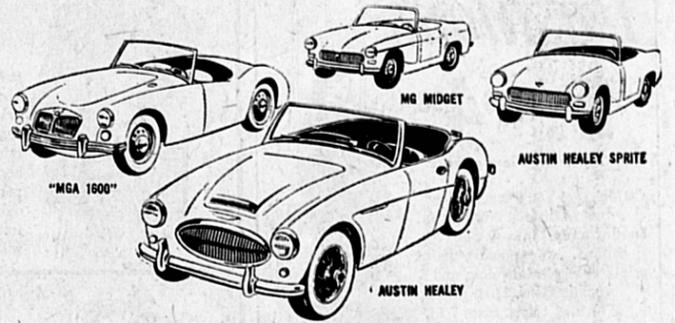

How heavy is an ounce?

How long is a minute?

How great is a sports car?

LOOK TO THE WORLD'S STANDARDS FOR YOUR ANSWER!

To find the exact inch you would measure a platinum block in the National Bureau of Standards in Washington D. C. — You'd find the perfect ounce in the Sarbonne, Paris, France. One perfect minute of time would be recorded at the Greenwich Observatory, in England. • The world's Standard of performance and perfection in sports cars comes from the British Motor Corporation.
